About IBBY Canada 31
Welcome to the 2023 Edition of From Sea to Sea to Sea: Celebrating Indigenous Picture Books! I encourage you to celebrate this collection of 25 of the best Indigenous picture books published in Canada between 2020 and 2022. Care was taken to ensure that this collection reflects the diversity of First Nations, Métis and Inuit voices from sea to sea to sea, and that the titles are available and in print for anyone who wishes to access them. Please promote by reading and sharing the titles within this collection, as I hope you have for the titles curated within the first two collections (From Sea to Sea to Sea: Celebrating Indigenous Picture Books 2018 and 2021 editions).

Many people were involved in the creation of this special collection. Many thanks go out to the selection committee, who considered almost 100 titles in curating this collection. They are: Allison Taylor McBryde, children’s collection librarian, North Vancouver District Public Library; Joanne Schwartz, award-winning author and children’s librarian with the Toronto Public Library; Lorisia MacLeod (James Smith Cree Nation), Online Reference Coordinator with The Alberta Library and Chair of the Canadian Federation of Library Associations; Nancy Cooper (Rama First Nation), First Nation Consultant at the Southern Ontario Library Service. Special thanks also to Mary Beth Leatherdale, award-winning author and editor who is Founding Project Co-Chair of From Sea to Sea to Sea along with Dr. Jenny Kay Dupuis and was also Consulting Member to this edition. And last, but not least, thank you to Patti McIntosh, President of IBBY Canada, for her support of the selection committee.

Many thanks to designer Sean Simpson and to the production team members Kathleen Keenan and Claire Caldwell for constructing this lovely catalogue.

Finally, thank you so much to the publishers, who tirelessly support the catalogue by submitting titles, providing images, and helping to promote the collection.
We have confidence that this catalogue can help to guide you to some wonderful, quality board books and picture books. We live in an exciting time, with new picture books written by Indigenous authors and/or illustrated by Indigenous artists published more and more frequently. I encourage you to continue to read titles written and illustrated by Indigenous people and update your own collections as new titles become available.

Please celebrate the titles in this collection with us by using the hashtags #ReadIndigenous and #Indigenouspicturebooks and tagging @IBBYCanada on social media.

We hope you enjoy reading the catalogue and the titles within as much as we have!

Sincerely,
Colette Poitras (Métis Nation of Alberta)

Una Huna?: Ukpik Learns to Sew. Illustrated by Amiel Sandland and Rebecca Brook.
Inhabit Media, 2022. 9781772274332

Ukpik is curious to learn from her mother how to sew a pair of mittens. But she is even more curious to know what her mother has planned for her new beads. Her mother has just traded for the beads with the ship captain who travels from the south to their community annually. To sew a pair of mittens requires patience and many steps, over many days, to ensure nothing is wasted: cleaning, stretching, and drying the caribou skins, “crunching” the dried skins with their feet, softening them — and then mastering the careful stitches required to ensure the mittens are warm and will last. The story gently communicates the struggle to manage the influence of the outside world on Inuit children and to preserve tradition. As her mother says: “I wish for my Ukpik to know that her world is a beautiful one, and that all the things she is learning come from beautiful ancestors.” Inuktitut is incorporated throughout the text with a translation and pronunciation guide at the end. A follow-up to Una Huna?: What is This? (2018).

Adjun, Barbara [Inuk].
Berry Picking at Four Mile Bay. Illustrated by Kagan McLeod.
Inhabit Education, 2021. 9781774502839

Based on memories from the author’s childhood, this book follows Nekaloakyok as she recalls a special berry-picking outing on Four Mile Bay with her mother, aunts and Granny, and other families. As they travel by boat to get to the island, the beautiful day affords time to observe the landscape, see all the different types of berries and learn how to harvest akpiit (cloudberries) from the Elders. Evening brings a campfire on the beach with tea and bannock and a night ride home across the water. The straightforward telling is full of details that conjure the excitement of participating in this seasonal activity. (Also available in Inuktitut syllabics. ᐅᓇᓕᓐᓂᖅ ᑲᖏᖅᕼᐅᖕᒥ Inuktitut translation by Louise Flaherty [Inuk]. Inhabit Education Books, 2021).
Loud noises are hard for Thunder. They make him feel stormy inside, like a noise storm. After an incident at school, Mosom comes to pick up Thunder. They go for a walk in the forest and Mosom teaches Thunder about the concept of “mamaskasitawew” or “to listen with wonder.” Mosom and Thunder listen hard for the natural sounds all around them. Mosom says “Thunder, Thunder, listen with wonder.” Thunder, with help from Mosom, calms the noise storm inside of him.
Boivin, Lisa [Deninu K’ue First Nation].
We Dream Medicine Dreams.
HighWater Press, 2021. 9781553799870

Grampa teaches his grandchild the importance of dreams, that there is “medicine in our dreams.” Through dreaming of animals, we learn how to face life’s challenges. He shares lessons from the bear, the hawk, the caribou and the wolf. It is through these medicine dreams and teachings that we learn how to understand the world and how to cope with grief. We also learn the power of connection, kinship and healing through culture.

Campbell, Nicola I. [Nłeʔkepmx, Syílx and Métis].
Stand Like a Cedar.
Illustrated by Carrielynn Victor [Coast Salish/European].
HighWater Press, 2021. 9781553799214

Going for a canoe ride, walking on the land through the changing seasons, this story takes you on a journey through a child’s eyes. The book asks, “Who did you see, who did you hear?” Children are reminded to take care of one another and the land, to honour and be thankful for all of Earth’s creatures. The title includes a glossary at the back with Nłeʔkepmxcín, Stó:lō Halq’eméylem and Syílx (Okanagan) nsyilxcen phrases and words, their phonetic pronunciations, the English translations and a translation guide. (Also available in French. Debout comme un grand cèdre. French translation by Sylvie Nicolas. Éditions Hannenorak, 2021.)
Bear, Alberta-Rose [Cree] and Kathleen O’Reilly.
Nimosôm anima / nimihšômihš ta-minciwênciman / Grandfather’s Reminder.
Illustrated by Lindsey Bear [Cree]. Plains Cree translation by Solomon Ratt [Stanley Mission]. Saulteaux translation by Lorena Cote [Saulteaux] and Margaret Cote [Saulteaux].
Your Nickel’s Worth Publishing, 2022. 9781988783826

Told in paskwâwinîmowin (Plains Cree), anihsinâpêmowin (Saulteaux) and English, this story of an outing to pick chokeberries beautifully illustrates the need for gratitude and respect for Mother Earth. Both Grandfather and Grandmother have opportunities to teach important lessons to their grandson as he impatiently tries to pick berries beyond his reach and breaks a branch. They gently pass on the knowledge that their grandson needs to be a future caretaker of his environment. An afterword includes a Plains Cree and Saulteaux pronunciation guide.
From the stunning painting of seagulls circling on the endpapers, to the rich browns, green and blues of the land and ocean, this visual feast accompanies a gentle, rhythmic and poetic text as a boy and his grandfather row with the tide to the halibut bank. Few words are shared throughout the day, but patience, gratitude and traditional skills are subtly passed on in Haida artist Robert Davidson's memories of fishing with his grandfather. This is one of four titles available in the Sk’ad’a Stories series from the same authors and illustrator. The series currently includes Learning to Carve Argillite (2021), Returning to the Yakoun River (2022), and Dancing with Our Ancestors (2022).
Davis, Shawna [Gitksan/Nisga’a].

Majagalee: The Language of Seasons.
Photographs by Toonasa
Jordana Luggi [Wet’suwet’en/Dakelh].
McKellar & Martin, 2022. 9781990458002

Traditional beadwork and hand-cut paper backgrounds by Shawna Davis are arranged and photographed to create stunning illustrations that tell the story of the changing seasons, starting with winter’s end. Each page is a poetic vignette describing the various plants and animals that signify the seasonal cycles. Spring rain brings majagalee, the sweet wildflowers; firewood and roses bloom in summer, and the salmon is abundant; fall brings the red and gold shower of changing leaves; and as winter comes again, bear prepares for his long sleep. The gratitude and reverence for the land are deeply felt in this unique, artistic expression.

George, Doris [Cree] and Don K. Philpot.

kā-āciwīkicik / The Move.
Illustrated by Alyssa Koski [Kainai Nation].

kā-āciwīkicik / The Move depicts the impact of community displacement on one elderly couple and draws upon the authors’ familial and personal experiences with the forcible relocation of Chemawawin First Nation in northern Manitoba in the 1960s. While the old man is resigned to living out his remaining days in the barren and lifeless landscape to which they have been relocated, the old woman draws upon the power of hope, and her faith in traditional customs and knowledge, to bring life — nature and family — to their new home. And in the end, through her beliefs, life blooms: “It’s good here,” she says. “We will provide for ourselves. That is all.” The painterly illustrations show the contrasting landscapes, moving from bleak greys to inviting earth tones. A fascinating authors’ note describes the “shaping” of the story and the authors’ back-and-forth between English and Cree as they created the text for this unique and mystical book.

Johnston, Aviaq [Inuk].

Grandfather Bowhead, Tell Me A Story.

Illustrated by Tamara Campeau.

Inhabit Media, 2021. 9781772272970

In the depths of the Arctic Ocean, Little Arvaaq, a young bowhead calf, implores his Grandfather Bowhead to tell him a story. Grandfather Bowhead speaks of the many wondrous things he has seen in his 200-year lifetime but says not even “the northern lights running across the vast sky” compare to the wonder of Little Arvaaq’s first breath. This deep expression of love for Little Arvaaq is illustrated in many more examples in this tender dialogue, giving the story a rhythmic, lullaby feel, like waves rolling in and out of the ocean. (Also available as a board book in Inuktitut syllabics. ᐊᑖᑕᑦᑎᐊᖅ, ᐅᓂᒃᑲᐅᑎᖅ. Inuktitut translation by Monica Ittusardjuat [Inuk]. Inhabit Media, 2021.)

Flett, Julie [Cree/Métis].

We All Play / kimêtawânaw.

Greystone Books, 2021. 9781771646079

Flett takes children on a journey through nature, as she invites kids to “hide and hop” and “rumble and roll” as our animal friends do. She reminds us that like the animals, “We play too! kimêtawânaw mîna”! Not only a charming and whimsical story, We All Play is also a celebration of nêhiyawêwin (Cree) language, as well as the Cree teachings of how we are all related — humans and animals. A short glossary is included at the end of the book, with English and Cree words for each animal. (Also available in French.  Tout le monde joue / kimêtawânaw. French translation by Fanny Britt. La Pastèque, 2021.)
Thomas loves to tell tall tales. He tells embellished stories about what a good harvester he is and how well he can live on the land. His friends grow tired of his tales and challenge him to prove it by spending a night alone in the forest with only his backpack. He shows little respect for the environment, as he litters and strips the bark of trees. The trees, seeing and hearing his disrespect for the environment, start to dance, uproot and move so that he is unable to find his way back until he changes his ways. From this experience, he learns about environmental stewardship, speaking the truth, humility and respect for the lessons of his Elders. (Also available in Inuinnaqtun Roman orthography. Numiqtut Napaaqtut. Innuinnaqtun translation by Rosemarie Meyok [Inuk], Gwen Angulalik [Inuk], and Julia Ogina [Inuk]. Inhabit Media, 2021. Also available in Inuktitut syllabics. ᑳᖏᖅᑐᑦ ᒧᒥᖅᑐᑦ. Inuktitut translation by Jeela Palluq-Cloutier [Inuk]).
Warren and his cousin Matthew are getting ready to pick sweetgrass with Auntie. As it is his first time, Warren has many lessons to learn. This gentle story with vivid illustrations is a lovely way for children of all ages to learn about the Mi’kmaq way to harvest sweetgrass and the importance of family and community, as well as sharing, reciprocity, giving thanks respectfully and environmental stewardship.
Luby, Brittany [Anishinaabe descent, paternal ancestors from Niisaachewan Anishinaabe Nation in Treaty #3].
Mii maanda ezhi-gkendmaanh / This Is How I Know.
Illustrated by Joshua Mangeshig Pawis-Steckley [Anishinaabe]. Anishinaabemowin translation by Alvin Ted Corbiere [Anishinaabe] and Alan Corbiere [Anishinaabe].
Groundwood Books, 2021. 9781773063263

“When yellow Bumblebee collects purple fireweed with me, and we spy brown Screech Owl asleep in the tree… This is how I know summer.” The glorious sights, sounds and colours of the four seasons are celebrated in Mii maanda ezhi-gkendmaanh / This Is How I Know. The reader looks over the shoulder of the narrator, a young girl, and her grandmother and travels with them through the year to see and feel what makes each season special. Drawing upon the author’s and the illustrator’s childhood memories, and time they spent with Knowledge Keepers on the Great Lakes, the story beautifully evokes an appreciation for the interconnectedness of the generations — and of the elements of our natural world. The illustrations, in the style of Woodland art, further this appreciation with amazing detail, as we see lakeside settings with the sun setting into an “orange dream” in the summer and an orange star “showing bedtime is near” in the spring. Also available in Braille.

King, Sharon [Potawatomi].
Amik.
Kegedonce Press, 2021. 9781928120285

This dual language (Anishinaabemowin/English) board book tells the story of amik the beaver as he goes about his day busily working to build a dam. We are shown many of the other beings in creation doing their jobs. The spider builds her web, the bear looks for berries and the birds fly overhead and sing their songs. At the end of the day, amik goes home to his family. The book teaches in a simple, easy-to-read format. The paper-collage art was also created by the author.
Niptanatiak, Allen [Inuk].
Animals Illustrated: Wolverine.
Illustrated by Patricia Ann Lewis-MacDougall.
Inhabit Media, 2021. 9781772272987

Animals Illustrated: Wolverine blends scientific facts about the animal with gorgeous full-page colour illustrations to create a book that will delight readers mentally as well as artistically. Niptanatiak shares the scientific facts about the animal in a very accessible and simple way, so despite its factual nature this book feels like anything but a boring textbook. A key focus of the facts is how the wolverine engages with its surroundings and other animals, making it a great way to introduce young readers to the Indigenous concept of relationality. Part of the Animals Illustrated series, with other titles highlighting the walrus, the bowhead, the polar bear, and more. (Also available in Inuinnaqtun Roman orthography. Huradjat Titiraujaqtait: Qalvik.
Inuinnaqtun translation by Rosemarie Meyok [Inuk]. Inhabit Media, 2021. Also available in Inuktitut syllabics. ᐃᓄᐃᑦ ᑎᑎᖅᑐᒐᖅᓯᒪᔪᑦ ᖃᕝᕕᑦ. Inuktitut translation by Jaypeetee Arnakak [Inuk]. Inhabit Media, 2022.)

Prince, Leona and Gabrielle [Lake Babine Nation and Nak’azdli Whut’en / Likh Tsa Mis Yu (Beaver) Clan].
Be a Good Ancestor.
Illustrated by Carla Joseph [Cree].

With stunning simplicity and elegance, Leona and Gabrielle Prince capture the relationships between everything from the smallest elements in our lives to the largest. Following a repetitive pattern — “Seeds become seedlings. Seedlings become trees. Trees become forests. Forests become oxygen” — the words explore connections from the natural world to human relationships. The artwork reflects the beauty and flow of the language with glowing portraits of bears, salmon, eagles and landscapes.

Robertson, David Alexander. [Swampy Cree].
On the Trapline.
Illustrated by Julie Flett [Cree/Métis].
Tundra Books, 2021. 9780735266681

Moshom (Grandfather) and his grandson fly up north to visit the trapline, which is where Moshom once hunted, fished and lived off the land. The reader learns the importance of such things as sharing, kindness and respect for Elders. Lessons also abound about family, the land, culture, the food, chores and the traditional lifestyle. The book includes notes from the author and the illustrator, as well as a glossary of the Swampy Cree words used throughout and a pronunciation guide. (Also available in French. Ligne de trappe. French translation by Brittany Luby [Anishinaabe descent, paternal ancestors from Niisachewan Anishinaabe Nation in Treaty #3] and Arnaud Bessière. Éditions Scholastic, 2021.)
Spillett-Sumner, Tasha [Cree/Trinidadian].
I Sang You Down from the Stars.
Illustrated by Michaela Goade [Tlingit].
Owlkids Books, 2021. 9781771474085

Pastel, organic watercolours go beyond the natural world to the cosmos with a flowing, star-studded breeze that travels from page to page and follows a woman’s journey through the seasons and her pregnancy. The mother gathers eagle plumes, cedar and sage for the baby’s bundle and creates a star blanket to welcome the baby, who arrives in the spring. The lyrical text honours the patience, the hopes and the dreams of every mother as she says “I loved you before I met you. Before I held you in my arms. I sang you down from the stars.”

Sainte-Marie, Buffy [Cree].
Still This Love Goes On.
Illustrated by Julie Flett [Cree/Métis].
Greystone Books, 2022. 9781771648073

Inspired by Buffy Sainte-Marie’s song of the same name, this book evokes the rhythm of the seasons and the sound of the drum. She compares her words to “taking photos with my heart of the things I see on the reserve.” Love is the touchstone of this song — love for sun-drenched meadows, the smell of sweetgrass, the sound of jingle dancers and her endless love for nature, family and culture. Julie Flett’s solid blocks of blue, gray, green and white are broken by patterns of flying geese, stampeding buffalo, footprints in the snow, meadow flowers — and babies, parents, families. This is a book to love, cherish, listen to, sing and share with every child.
Syliboy, Alan [Mi’kmaq].
Mi’kmaw Daily Drum: Mi’kmaw Culture for Every Day of the Week.
Nimbus Publishing, 2020. 9781771088893

Syliboy introduces the Indigenous petroglyph style of art that decorates his drums. The “drum is the heartbeat of Mother Earth.” Each page in this colourful board book unites representations of turtle, caribou, bear, whale and cultural references to Muin, Spirit Woman, the eight-point star and the round dance with the names of the days of the week in Mi’kmaw and English.
Whitecrow, Darcy [Ojibwe/Dakota] and Heather M. O’Connor.

Runs With the Stars.
Illustrated by Lenny Lishchenko.
Second Story Press, 2022. 9781772602388

Noozhis loves his grandfather’s Ojibwe horses, especially pregnant Star. Each day, as he helps with their care, he repeatedly asks to hear the story of how the tiny herd has survived over the years. Passionate about the horses, Noozhis even dreams about Star’s foal just before she is born, illustrating the deep, loving bond between the boy and the herd. An afterword tells the real story of the Ojibwe horses, also known as the Lac La Croix Indigenous Pony, and the efforts of Fred Isham, and others, that rescued them from near extinction. (Also available in dual-language English/Anishinaamebowen edition. Wiijibibamatoon Anangoonan/Runs with the Stars. Anishinaabemowen translation by Kelvin Morrison (Kiitaabines) [Nigigoonsiminikaaning First Nation]. Second Story Press, 2022.)

Vickers, Roy Henry [Tsimshian, Haida and Heiltsuk] and Robert Budd.

A is for Anemone: A First West Coast Alphabet.
Harbour Publishing, 2021. 9781550179477

With his iconic bold colours and silhouetted images, Roy Henry Vickers introduces the west coast to the youngest readers. Simple rhyming sentences introduce animals from dogfish to orcas, geography from islands to valleys, and culture from paddlers to totem poles. The glowing sunsets and rainbows are enhanced by slick black raised tactile outlines, patterns and reflections, which will encourage children to touch the hidden clamshells, fish, whales and totems.

Using the Collection

This list reflects the most current attitudes and approaches to Indigenous literature today. Having these titles in your collection will allow children to find the books they need at the right moment.

Creating a caring environment

When using the books in this collection, it’s important to create a caring environment where readers can ask questions and explore perspectives. Some topics may be difficult for readers. Be prepared to be faced with potentially sensitive topics or challenging, thought-provoking conversations. Come with strategies for facilitating and encouraging discussions that will prepare, engage and inform readers. Readers who are learning about issues that have affected their own lives, their families and/or communities, such as the residential school system, may find discussions very challenging. Consider raising awareness of support services available to readers and their families in the event that discussing the topic has a personal impact.

About IBBY Canada

IBBY Canada is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to creating a more inclusive and equitable world by connecting children to books that spark the imagination, challenge thinking, and promote friendship and understanding between cultures around the world. We are one of more than 80 national sections of IBBY (the International Board on Books for Young People), founded in 1953 to bring books and children together. IBBY Canada was formed in 1980 to enact positive change through children’s literature by supporting, promoting, and honouring creators of Canadian children’s literature and encouraging the creation and distribution of quality children’s literature.
